No Iron Curtain

The Communist attitude is getting to be pretty well known to Americans. Even the Iron Curtain has not been able to hold behind its barriers the ideas and thoughts of men. We have come to understand what the Russian Communists think by watching the actions of their American comrades. Everybody knows that the Communist party in this country watches Moscow closely. We can believe that Moscow keeps them in line, too.

Everybody knows also that the Communist party in the United States is not very powerful. In terms of what it can do legally as a party, the average American gives it very little attention. However, what the party would do if it thought it could get away with it—that is another thing. In this respect, home-grown Communist opinion is very enlightening.

Outside the Law

Recently, William Z. Foster, top man for the Communists in America, told the Senate his party would not support the nation in event of war with Russia. He was testifying before the Judiciary Committee on the Mundt-Nixon bill, which would put strict controls on Communists. Foster defiantly told the committee that if the bill should become law the party would not register with the Department of Justice as required.

Foster shouted that Russia would never attack the United States. His reason: Russia is not an imperialistic nation. At the same time, he said that America has embarked upon an imperialistic program, the greatest in history. (Imperialism means the practice of seeking control or dominion over other lands and peoples.) Way the American Communists have the situation sized up bears no kinship to the plain truth in international affairs.

Who's Imperialistic?

Any school boy knows that America has no ambitions for the control and domination of other countries. On the other hand, what Russia is doing in eastern Europe looks like the most obvious kind of "taking over." It is this same William Z. Foster who once wrote that the Communist party would take over the United States government and liquidate the free enterprise system, along with the Republican and Democratic parties and our religious institutions.

The rankiest kind of imperialism known today may be seen in the Communist International, to which all world Communists are responsible. This world organization exists for the purpose of satisfying the imperialistic ambitions of Russia's political rulers. It works by boring from within. It uses Communists wherever they are. It plots the overthrow of other governments by force. It incites revolutions wherever Communists stand to gain.

Watch the tactics. Communists will continue to do everything possible by whatever methods, to hamper domestic peace and prosperity. They seek to set workers against employers, to create costly strikes and walkouts that cost the American public and workers billions of dollars.

The Communists did these things during the recent war. No good may be expected from them, either in time of war or peace. As good American citizens we must study these tactics, so that when we see the fruits of Communist subversion we can identify the tree from whence it came. As Communist tactics and ideas are made clear, every one of us will have more appreciation for our own way of life.

HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE

IMPORTANCE OF MAKING A WILL

If you want to save from worry those you leave behind you, make a Will. Even then they may have legal technical difficulties, but not so many as if you died intestate, and you will be more likely to have your money or effects distributed as you would want them to be.

In a talk the other day with John Foster, Corn Exchange Bank, 33rd Street and 7th Avenue, New York City, he said that a very large percentage of the business of lawyers came to them because of men and women dying without making a will.

Said Mr. Foster, "the law will take care of your estate after you've gone far, far better than while you are here; It will take the full responsibility after your death of seeing that your wishes are carried out."

D. Carnegie

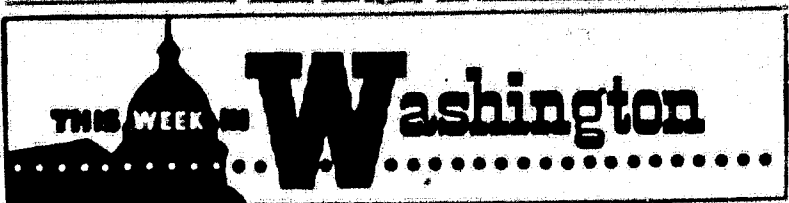

Then he told me a story of a relative of his, a widowed cousin, who was the second wife of her husband. There were several children of the husband by his first wife. He died without a will. Since his children were all of legal age, and married, everything he had went to his second wife. Before she could make a will, she became ill, and never again was competent to make a will. She died.

What do you think happened to that husband's estate? Yes, it was inherited wholly by the distant relatives of his second wife, most of whom he had never even so much as laid eyes on. The children of the man who earned the fortune got not so much as one penny!

Do you think that was in accordance with what that man would have wished? You know full well that it wasn't.

Another instance, known to me personally: A man named George Brown was killed in an automobile accident. Shortly thereafter, his only child, a daughter died, leaving no descendant. Her husband inherited the estate. He died after a few months, and before the estate had even so much as been settled, the property went to that husband's family, leaving out entirely the twin brother of the founder of the estate, and the man who had helped him start it in his early years of struggle, and of whom he was very fond. Naturally, he would have wanted his twin brother to inherit over those who meant nothing to him.

Yes, make a will, and plan for what happens to your money in case your first choice never collects.

RIVALRY between the house and senate committees to stay in the spotlight on the spy probes... the blazing quarrel over who is to blame for high prices... the annual or perennial controversy over how much or how little congress spent or saved... the continuing cold war with Russia... Maurice J. Tobin's withdrawal from the gubernatorial race in Massachusetts to take the secretary of labor appointment... all were interesting factors in a busy week in Washington.

But observers here declare that never in this session of the country has such interest been manifest as in the agricultural experiment which in one eight-hour day transformed a 175-acre, 200-year-old farm into a modern, scientific agricultural unit with the most up-to-date practices of conservation, planning, fertilizing and building.

Some 80,000 people, headed by agricultural secretary Charles F. Brannan and Maryland's governor, Preston Lane, trekked to the old farm homestead near Frederick, Md., which had been in the Thresher family since 1877. The picture resembled a huge county fair with 23 concession tents dispensing 80,000 bottles of pop and some 50,000 hot dogs and other victuals. Five hundred workers, under the direction of the county agent and agricultural department experts, with 150 power machines moved onto the place, and in eight hours had erected a huge quonset-type dairy barn and also, repaired the house and other buildings, conducted some 50 modern farm conservation practices including contour plowing, reforestation of the wooded section up the side of a fairly high mountain, the spreading of tons of lime and fertilizer, planting of a 40-acre wheat field, construction of an acre-pond, and a score of other undertakings.

Edward W. Davis, director of the U. S. soil conservation service, said it was the largest agricultural event ever to take place in the East. Scores of attaches from almost every foreign embassy, ministry and legation in Washington travelled the 30 miles to the farm to view the demonstration for a report to their own countries.

Secretary Brannan said, "We see here a demonstration of the American people's awareness that the land is important and that its conservation is essential to our continued well-being."

tion is essential to our continued well-being."

Said Governor Lane: "The very presence of this great assemblage of people is evidence that our citizenry in all walks of life and occupations is alive to the urgency of combating the greatest enemy attacking our natural resources, erosion of our life-sustaining soil."

The farm was rolling land and considerably eroded, having been worked by Mrs. Nellie V. Thresher, a widow, and her son, for the past three years since the death of her husband. It was an ideal location for conversion from the old straight-row farming to contour farming. Not only did the workers change the entire contour of the farm land, they set up a saw mill in the wood land, cut fenceposts and demonstrated setting them both by machine and by hand. They demonstrated the planting of hundreds of trees by machine and by hand; they constructed several miles of farm road; they built several miles of new contour fencing; they modernized the house and existing farm buildings and constructed the new dairy barn from the ground up, a barn which will stanchion 35 cows; they instituted a drainage system; they spread 100 tons of lime and 25 tons of fertilizer; and they sowed a ton of grass seed to rebuild the permanent pastures. Labor and materials expended were worth approximately $20,000.

Said Secretary Brannan: "Unless conservation such as you have observed here today is practiced on American farms, in another 150 years this country will be unable to feed itself adequately."

"Even after the conservation programs of the past 18 years, half the cropland we use is still subject to erosion in some degree. As for our forests, the rate of saw timber drain is one and a half times the rate of growth."

"We have been living off our reserves of land and forests. We did not really recognize soil erosion as a national problem which must be attacked on a national basis until 1938. Today there are about 300 soil conservation districts. They include about three-fourths of all the nation's farms and ranches."

Thousands of feet of film from movie cameras photographed the spectacular scene which was performed on the Thresher farm to be shown throughout this country and in most foreign countries.

GIVE THE KIDS A CHANCE

Every parent whose child rides a bike will want to take a long look at the statistics on bicycle accidents recently totaled up by traffic authorities. Unless something is done about it, the coming year will again see more than 25,000 bicyclists—most of them children—killed or injured in street and highway accidents.

Ever since the coming of automobiles, bicycles have been tolerated somewhat grudgingly as hybrids in the vehicle family—a sort of cross between a pedestrian and a motor vehicle—with neither willing to accept them. Pedestrians don't want them on the sidewalks; motorists call them a nuisance and a danger on the streets. Where there are no proper regulations for their operation, cyclists ride to the right, to the left, through red lights, in and out between moving cars, and sometimes even travel afoot beside their bikes in crowded traffic.

Such a state of affairs is hair-raisingly dangerous. It is unfair to cyclists, motorists and pedestrians alike; for accidents are often caused by cyclists even though the bicycle itself may not be hit in the crash. But perhaps the worst damage of all is to character. Young people are encouraged in habits of recklessness and lack of respect for traffic laws, and this is the worst possible preparation for them as future citizens and car-owners.

Cure for this situation would seem to lie not in outlawing bicycles, but in giving them a respectable place in the traffic family. Every community should welcome a constructive program for enforcement of such traffic regulations as apply to bicycles and for their registration, licensing and inspection.

Let's give the kids a chance!

MORE GAINS FOR LABOR

It should be remembered that when the Taft-Hartley law was passed, the CIO-PAC organization announced that it would fight to defeat every member of Congress who voted for it.

Since that time, 147 members who supported the Act have come up for re-nomination, and 137 of them have won. And only one of the 10 who lost represented a major northern industrial district, where CIO-PAC supporters are supposed to be strong.

This certainly indicates that the rank and file of union labor, like the rank and file of the voters at large, doesn't servilely follow the orders of the big-shot union officers. And there is plenty of reason why it should not. The leaders denounced the Taft-Hartley Act as a slave labor law, which would make the most ruthless exploitation of the worker both possible and inevitable. Yet what has actually happened?

Some of the principle labor groups have made some of their greatest gains since the law was passed. Soft coal is a prime example. The new contract gives the miners an extremely liberal pension plan. It further increased pay—even though the miners received the highest wage of any comparable group before the new contract. The short working day remains in effect. Every benefit the miners had before the Taft-Hartley Act, was retained and more are now enjoyed.

Workers in steel, automobile and other big industries have also won new gains. To say that the Taft-Hartley Act has in any way weakened labor is to deny the obvious truth.

Apparently the members of Congress who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act benefited labor, and the workers know it.

JUST A MATCH

Take a look at a match. It's a cheap, necessary, and innocent looking little article. Yet matches have caused the destruction of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property and tens of thousands of lives.

The same thing is true of cigarettes. Great forests, homes, factories—all have gone up in smoke and flame because people didn't go to the trouble of putting smoldering materials completely out when discarding them.

How about the cords that carry the juice to your lamps? Their cost is small and they can be installed in a matter of minutes. Yet, easy as it is to replace them when frayed, short-circuits also have a gigantic toll of destruction to life and property to their credit.

These three examples show the main causes of fire—and the ease with which fires can be prevented. The vast majority of fires are the result of one thing only—the human factor. Someone is lazy. Someone is careless. Someone puts off till tomorrow what should be done today. Then fire strikes. The loss may be great or it may be small. In either case, it is totally unnecessary. Keep that in mind when smoking, when checking household equipment, or when doing anything that has a bearing on fire hazards.

Say you saw it in the CITIZEN.

What Every Wife and Mother in Maine Can Do to Protect Her Family's Security

Yes, there is something you can do to help protect your family's financial security.

Go to the polls on September 13 and vote FOR the Barlow Bill! This will not only protect your husband's right to work, but every person's right to work . . . to bring home a weekly paycheck . . . whether he belongs to a labor union or not. In other words, he could not be refused work—or fired—just because he does not belong to a union—or does belong to a union.

By voting FOR the Barlow Bill you will also be voting against sympathetic and jurisdictional strikes . . . the kind that may throw your husband out of work for weeks . . . even months . . . because of a labor dispute that neither he nor his employer have anything at all to do with!

A vote FOR the Barlow Bill also means that your husband won't be laid off, through no fault of his own, because some union boss orders his men to boycott the place where your husband works because of a labor-management dispute going on somewhere else.

WHY THE BARLOW BILL IS NOT ANTI-LABOR

Don't be misled by those who are distorting the facts . . . who are spending many thousands of dollars of the individual union members' money . . . to give you and them an entirely wrong idea of how the Barlow Bill affects the rights of organized labor.

Here are the facts that prove the Barlow Bill is not anti-labor.

VOTE FOR THE BARLOW BILL

It does not prohibit the right of collective bargaining, the right to join a union, the right to organize a union or the voluntary collection of union dues.

It does prohibit discrimination against union members by management.

It does not prohibit the right to strike for reasons relating to wages, rates of pay, hours and conditions of employment.

The Barlow Bill has nothing to do with wages, seniority rights, paid vacations, insurance, eight-hour day, sick benefits or other employee benefit plans.

The Barlow Bill does not relate in any way to child labor laws, female employment laws, minimum wages, old age pensions, unemployment compensation, workmen's compensation laws or overtime pay.

In a nutshell, the Barlow Bill PROTECTS THE RIGHT TO WORK OF EVERY INDIVIDUAL IN MAINE, without interference by either union bosses or employers!

MANY IN SEASONAL WORK LOSE OLD-AGE BENEFITS

Summer businesses can unknowingly put their employees in a bad fix when it comes to claiming Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits, John M. Beal, Manager of the Lewiston office of the Social Security Administration points out. The difficulty occurs in claims based on employment for family or close corporations which operate year-round, as well as for seasonal enterprises.

It has already cropped up repeatedly in Androscoggin, Franklin, and Oxford Counties, Beal explains, adding that it is expected to occur more often in the future as a larger number of workers die or stop working at or after age 65.

Root of the problem is that many of these businesses pay salaries to certain of their officers and employees in only one of the four quarterly social security return periods per year. This is typical at the end of the summer season, or for a year-round business, just after an annual stockholders' meeting in December. In order for worker to keep "insured" under the old-age and survivors insurance system, however, his account must

MOTORISTS URGED TO LOOK OUT FOR DEER ON HIGHWAYS

With deer coming into fields and crossing roads in many parts of Maine, Inland Fisheries and Game Commissioner George J. Stobie asks motorists to "use every precaution to avoid hitting these game animals."

REDSKINS EDGE ANDOVER, 9-8 IN 11-INNING THRILLER

Scoring two runs in the ninth inning to tie up the contest, the Bethel Redskins pushed the winning marker in the 11th inning to pull the game out of the fire.

Andover got off to an early one run lead in the initial stanza as Roberts stroled, went to second as A. Cyr went out, Young to Davis, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a single by Feener.

The Redskins scored three runs on five hits in the third inning but Andover came back with one in the fourth and took a five to four lead at the end of five innings as Bethel scored a single tally in the bottom half of that frame.

Andover scored single markers in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings. The Redskins scored two in the seventh and two in the ninth to tie the game at nine all. The Andover tenth started quite harmlessly as Roberts and A. Cyr went down, but with two away Feener doubled but was left stranded as L. Cyr struck out. Bethel failed to produce the winning tally in the tenth but, after Andover had been retired in order in the top of the eleventh, with one out Young walked, after Young had walked the required 90 feet to first base the Andover manager protested that Young had batted out of turn, this was straightened out for the time being and the game went merrily on. With Young on first, Hall hit to Roberts whose throw to Caron nipped Young at second, but Ted blocked Caron effectively as he threw wide to first, Hall reaching. Hall stole second as Andover neglected to call time as they continued arguing. Herbie Lyon then singled sharply through short, Hall scoring the winning run from second. Dave Bennett's hitting streak was stopped at nine straight when he hit to the second baseman in the seventh but reached first anyway when L. Cyr erred on the play.

According to plans now afoot the married men of our fair town will encounter the unmarried side of the masculine gender Sunday afternoon at the old fair grounds. The Redskins will participate in the baseball tournament at Rumford Point on Labor Day. They will meet Andover again at 1 p. m. The winner of this game will meet the winner of the Rumford Point-Sum-per game, which is at 10 in the morning. The play-off is scheduled for 3:30 p. m.

The Highest Bidder

A Short-Short Story
By Marjorie Abbott

"SOLD!" The auctioneer's nasal voice rang out over the crowd. The elderly man who had just purchased the antique chest of drawers smiled contentedly. The crowd moved across the farm lawn in the hot sunshine to the table of dishes. The women murmured excitedly as they looked at the milk glass pitcher and the dainty old-fashioned china tea set.

Old Mr. Wagner dreamed in the sunshine as he watched his household goods being sold. He had lived with these things most of his 80 years, but now that his wife Mary was gone, they were no longer important.

Little Miss Eliza Derbyshire sat beneath a shade tree. She smoothed her graying hair with timid, gentle fingers. The antique doll cradle she was waiting to bid on was just a few feet from her. No one was looking at it. Perhaps this time there wouldn't be any competition.

The small cherry cradle was the one thing she lacked in her collection of antique toys. Even if the competition were still, she meant to have the cradle at any price, but it would be nice if just this once...

A thin, drooping child detached herself from the crowd and walked toward Miss Eliza. She was about seven years old. Her clothes, which were several sizes too large, hung loosely on her spare little frame. She was dirty. Her hair and her eyes were dull. Miss Eliza knew as she looked at her that she was a child of one of the onion workers, the itinerant families that worked during the spring and summer in the near-by onion marshes.

She glanced briefly at Miss Eliza. There was no friendliness in her eyes. She was only seven, but already she had learned that she was not welcome in the clean, thriving community of Layton.

The child approached the cradle. She sat down on the ground beside it, grinning. The loss on her small bare feet wiggled contentedly in the green grass as she looked at the cradle. With a defiant glance around her, she put her hand on the toy. She examined the smooth wood. Miss Eliza somehow knew, as she watched her, that this child had never owned a toy of her own.

"The little girl turned to Miss Eliza, she said unsmilingly, 'Purty, ain't it?'

"Yes," was the reply. "I've got a quarter. For a moment the pinched little face lit up. 'I'm going to buy it.' Miss Eliza's heart beat faster. The dishes were all sold. The crowd drifted toward the little cradle. The auctioneer held it up. "Who will start this off at five dollars?" he cried. "A gun-u-wine antique. Do I hear a bid? Five, did you say, Miss Derbyshire?" She nodded shyly.

The child touched his arm. He brushed her off impatiently. But this was her moment. She didn't mean to lose it. She became stubborn, and stubbornness made her brave. During the stare of all these people who disliked her, she spoke up, "Paw give me a quarter. I want to buy the cradle."

"Go away, little girl," said the auctioneer. "You don't have enough money to buy this." He turned back to the crowd. A well-dressed man, a stranger in the community, bid the cradle up to ten dollars.

"I have ten dollars," cried the auctioneer. "A ten — a ten — a ten — who'll make it fifteen?" He looked at Miss Eliza and caught her timid little nod. The price went up to fifteen.

The little girl had gone to the edge of the crowd. She was crying, loud, uninhibited wails. Several people tried to quiet her, but to no avail. Over the bidding, which went up and up and up, came the broken-hearted cries of the child.

Someone whispered, "She's one of Tad Parrish's brood. No mother, poor kid. Runs wild. He drinks so much he never knows where his young ones are."

"A hundred dollars, Miss Derbyshire?" said the auctioneer. Long practice kept the surprise out of his eyes. She nodded. He turned to the stranger. "A hundred and ten?" he pleaded. The man shook his head. He was through. The cradle belonged to Miss Eliza.

She picked it up in loving fingers. She took it to her car and placed it on the front seat.

But her joy in possessing the much desired toy was clouded by the cries of the child.

She walked toward the small girl. She looked down at the dirty, tear-stained face, at the wise eyes that knew, even as they grieved, the tears would do no good. Thoughts ran through Miss Eliza's head. Thoughts about juvenile delinquents, unwanted children. And suddenly she knew that she, Miss Eliza Derbyshire, respected, well-to-do spinster of the town of Layton and this dirty seven-year-old nobody were very very much alike under the surface. They were both so bitterly lonely that they relied on the possession of tangible things, such as toys, to give them a sense of fulfillment.

"I have a lot of toys at my house," said Miss Eliza timidly. "I'd like to have you come and play with them often. And," she added when the child didn't rebuff her, "I'd like to sew. I'd make a dress for you."

The child began to smile, the smile of an old woman, who had known hardship and sorrow and even despair.

"And you may have the cradle, too," said Miss Eliza grandly. The words cost her a bitter twinge, but a great weight lifted from her heart as she said them.

"Thank you, ma'am," said the little girl simply. "I'll give you my quarter."

The sale was over. Old Mr. Wagner sat on his front porch and talked things over with the auctioneer. "Things sold good," he said proudly. He shot a stream of tobacco juice accurately at a nearby rose bush. "And who would have thought that blamed cradle would go so high? I made that fifteen years ago for my granddaughter, Elly. Copied it from an old cradle of my own's. Guess I done a pretty good job, eh?"

Mary had a little Lamb,
And as they went to school;
They walked to the LEFT-
Instead of the right,
For that's the SAFETY RULE.

Even Mary's lamb can learn that easy safety rule! Best rule of all—for school children and everyone else—is: Don't walk on the highway. But if you must, then walk to the left, facing oncoming cars. Your chances of avoiding accident are three times better when you observe this rule.

Use special care at night and when roads are slippery. Even at moderate driving speeds, motorists often can't see pedestrians in time to stop. At 40 miles an hour, a safe stopping distance may be as much as 164 feet—much more at higher speeds.

When you walk on the highway, your life is your lookout. So—look out!

Nobody's Business is attracting some attention as readers speak to us occasionally. It is not our purpose to be over-critical of local conditions as we fully appreciate our surroundings, but too much satisfaction with things as they are is sure to lead us downhill. There seems to be a possibility that an airing of our opinions and the views of people we meet may help to make a better community.

Bethel's sidewalks have long been a tender subject, especially in the last quarter century when the last of our board walks have disappeared and weeds and/or lawns have swallowed up hundreds of feet of good dirt, gravel or cinder walks. There has been a little progress in late years when a few hundred dollars at a time have been appropriated for construction. It must be admitted that under this policy we are not gaining at all. This year's sidewalk project was only to rebuild a section of supposedly permanent concrete walk, while on either side of this sidewalk, and that of the last two jobs, are unsafe walks which have not been improved for many years.

We are not alone in our ignorance, it seems, so we ask: Would there be some economy in building some kind of asphalt or other black sidewalk? On Lower Main Street such a walk was built 60 years ago and some of it is not too bad yet. Surely with this construction we have no varying levels of concrete slabs and curbs, and repairs are not a heavy expense.

The village is becoming traffic minded, they say. The parking rules set up and O. K'd by the voters a few years ago were not unreasonable, some think, although many residents did not receive the book of rules and regulations issued last year. If you do not park too near driveways, intersections and hydrants, there is small chance for trouble. Some new no parking signs have been added on Main Street opposite the theater.

Brooks' hardware store is much improved by its new front with plate glass windows and a rearrangement of the store. Who will be next to modernize their place of business?
